

The Century Family Farm program celebrated its 50th anniversary in November with a “50 Days of Century Farms” series on the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services’ Facebook page. Every day, the page showcased one of the nearly 2,000 Century Farms in the state.

“COVID-19 wasn’t going to keep us from celebrating the considerable contributions our state’s Century Family Farms have made over the years,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. “It takes determination and grit to keep a farm in the family for 100 years or more. We are proud of these families and I know they are so proud of their farms.”

While the Century Family Farm Reunion was postponed, we hope to be able to gather together again soon.

Thank you Century Family Farms for being at the heart of the foundation of our state.
