Raleigh, N.C.

Ag advocates and farmers asked to join Ag Awareness Day at the Legislature March 18

Farmers, agribusiness workers, commodity groups and others will come to Raleigh on March 18 for N.C. Ag Awareness Day. They will take the message of agriculture's importance to their legislators and other state leaders.

Scheduled activities include a rally at the State Capitol and office visits with lawmakers. Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler and Gov. Pat McCrory are scheduled to speak at the rally.

County Farm Bureaus are organizing groups for the trip to Raleigh. Additional details about the event are available at www.ncagr.gov/ncagday.

N.C. State Fair Youth Livestock scholarship program accepting applications for first time

■ Deadline to apply is April 1

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services and the N.C. State Fair recently announced the creation of the N.C. State Fair Youth Livestock Scholarship Program.

The scholarships are designed for high school seniors and students currently enrolled in an institute of higher education who have participated in the junior livestock or market turkey shows at the N.C. State Fair.

"Agriculture is North Carolina's leading industry, but the average age of our farmers is almost 59," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "To keep agriculture strong, we need to invest in our next generation of farmers. I'm proud that the State Fair is recognizing the hard work of the youth who show livestock each year, and is encouraging them to continue their education."

The scholarships can be used at universities, community colleges and technical schools. The application package is available at www.ncstatefair.org. People with questions about the scholarship program should contact Neil Bowman, State Fair livestock show director, at 919-270-7094 or neil.bowman@ncagr.gov.

Completed applications are due at the N.C. State Fair office or postmarked by April 1.

The scholarships are funded by sponsors of the annual

Hemlock restoration funded for additional years

Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler recently announced additional funding for efforts to restore North Carolina's hemlock trees to long-term health.

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services will use $250,000 from the state's legal settlement with the Tennessee Valley Authority to continue supporting the Hemlock Restoration Initiative, which began last year. Over the next three years, the investment will support direct interventions on state and private lands, coordination of resources, and increasing volunteer efforts to save hemlock stands throughout the state.

Hemlocks across Western North Carolina are being decimated by the hemlock woolly adelgid, an insect that sucks the sap of young twigs, which leads to tree death. While thousands of trees have already died in the state, an integrated approach to pest management is showing positive results for the long-term survival of Eastern and Carolina hemlocks.

"We are committed to the fight to save North Carolina's hemlocks," Troxler said. "No one method of treatment is going to solve this problem, and the Hemlock Restoration Initiative brings together all the knowledge and support at our disposal. We've got to use existing approaches – and develop new tools – to give the hemlocks a fighting chance."

Recent efforts at combating the adelgid show promise for preserving existing stands and re-establishing hemlocks in areas where they have died. These include the introduction of predator insects that eat adelgids, the search for naturally resistant trees, and efforts to breed in resistance from similar tree species.

WNC Communities is the department's primary partner in the Hemlock Restoration Initiative. The Asheville-based nonprofit has experience in grants management, project development and using partnerships to achieve goals that benefit the region.

Commissioner Troxler

I want to use my column this month to talk about the Century Farm Family program that recognizes families whose farms have been in continual ownership for 100 years or more. I am proud to say that we even have some farms that have been owned by the same family for 200 years, an amazing feat.

It is no small task to have

by Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler

continual family ownership of a farm for 100 or more years. Families take a great deal of pride in being a Century Farm Family, and rightly so.

Heavy development pressure in some parts of the state often makes it difficult for families to hang onto the land, particularly as the farms are passed down to the next generation. I have had many offers on my own farm in Guilford County, but I have made it very clear I am not interested in selling.

I hope the farm will remain in my family for many years to come, and hopefully be a place my kids and grandchildren will enjoy.

As part of the Century Farm Family program, we hold a reunion in Raleigh at the State Fair every four years to honor this commitment to the land. It fills me with great pride to see so many families in attendance at the reunion. Agriculture built this state, and I know that these family members represent the hard work, sweat and determination behind that enormous achievement.

Our next reunion is slated for 2016, but between the reunions we continually accept applications for the program. So if your farm becomes eligible for the program, I would encourage you to fill out the application and send it to us.

You will need to provide the names and dates of the ownership of the farm, essentially how it was passed down among family members. Some people research records at the courthouse, and others use family Bibles or other documents that establish the history of ownership. Both forms of information are acceptable.

In the past month, we added a number of farms to the list, including a couple from my home county.

I extend my congratulations to the following farms for becoming Century Farm Families: Yanceyville and Dan River Farms (1815) of Caswell County; Emsley Scott Farm (1848) of Chatham County; Edwards Farm (1854) of Cleveland County; Cole Angus Farm (1877) of Buncombe County;

2015 boll weevil assessment set at $1 per acre

Boll weevil eradication efforts over the past 30 years have led to a resurgence in cotton production in the Southeast. In North Carolina, more than 450,000 acres of cotton were grown in 2014. Pictured, is cotton growing at the Upper Coastal Plain Research Station in Rocky Mount.

N.C. State Fair Junior Livestock Sale of Champions. The number of scholarships awarded each year will be based on qualified applicants and funds available from the previous year's Sale of Champions. Because of strong support of the 2014 sale, up to 24 scholarships valued at $2,000 each will be awarded this year.

For more on how individuals and organizations can support the 2015 Junior Livestock Sale of Champions or the scholarship program, contact Wesley Wyatt, State Fair manager, at wesley.wyatt@ncagr.gov or 919-821-7400; or Angie Crone, sponsorship director, at angie.crone@ncagr.gov or 919-839-4514.

Linda Lamp, executive director of WNC Communities, said the organization expects to announce a competitive call for proposals for research awards by early summer.

In 2014, the Hemlock Restoration Initiative made three $25,000 research awards to organizations pursuing different methods to save the hemlocks:

Blue Ridge Resource Conservation and Development is funding efforts to introduce Laricobius nigrinis, a tiny beetle native to Washington state that eats only adelgids, into the forests of Western North Carolina. Research results announced in late 2014 indicate the beetles may have begun to spread in the wild around Grandfather Mountain.

The Blue Ridge Parkway Foundation is coordinating with the National Park Service to identify and treat hemlocks on the parkway to preserve views. The immediate use of proven chemical treatments on the root system of hemlocks is effective in defending the trees for several years. This near-term intervention not only preserves trees for visitors to enjoy, but may also serve to keep trees alive until ecological approaches to managing the adelgid bear fruit.

Southwestern Resource Conservation and Development is assisting research efforts to identify and propagate hemlocks exhibiting resistance to adelgid death. Research plots are located at the Mountain Research Station in Waynesville.

The department is allocating the new funding over a three-year period. A portion of the money will support continued research into battling the adelgid, as well as supporting a full-time state coordinator and introduction of treatment methods on state and private lands. This funding will be used to attract matching funds from the U.S. Forest Service, private foundations, individuals and other sources with a shared goal of restoring hemlocks to their natural places.

The deadline for the April issue is March 2. Upcoming deadlines are April 1 for the May issue and May 4 for the June issue.

To keep up with the latest on the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, check out the department's blog at www.ncagr.gov/blog, where you can also find social media links.

The board of the Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation of North Carolina has set the 2015 boll weevil assessment at $1 per acre of cotton, keeping the fee the same as in 2014.

The fee supports the foundation's efforts to monitor cotton acreage in North Carolina for any re-introduction of the boll weevil and to respond promptly with eradication treatments if necessary.

"Cotton producers had a strong year in 2014, with record yields of 1,049 pounds per acre. The eradication of the boll weevil from the state in 1986 enabled cotton to return as one of our top crops," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "Overall, the boll weevil assessment is an excellent investment for growers, ensuring any spot re-introductions of boll weevils in this state are identified and dealt with quickly."

Foundation contractors will install and monitor traps from late summer until after harvest and frost. Because the focus of North Carolina's program has shifted from eradication to monitoring, the number of traps in fields has decreased.

As such, each trap is critical, and farmers are encouraged to contact the foundation if traps are damaged or knocked down.

Nearly 7,920 traps were placed and maintained in North Carolina last year, with each trap monitoring an average of 57.2 acres. To allow for trapping and monitoring, cotton growers are required to certify cotton acreage information with their local U.S. Farm Service Agency office by July 15.

Farmers in 53 counties grew 452,607 certified acres of cotton last year. The top three cotton-growing counties were Halifax, Northampton and Martin.

N.C. Forest Service finds Laurel wilt disease in Duplin County

The N.C. Forest Service has confirmed that laurel wilt, a devastating fungal disease of redbay and other plants in the laurel family, has been identified in Duplin County in an area near Rose Hill.

The disease has been identified across the Southeast in portions of South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. In North Carolina, it was first discovered in Bladen, Columbus, Pender and Sampson counties in 2011. Additional identifications were made in Brunswick County in 2012 and New Hanover County in 2013.

In North Carolina, sassafras, pondberry, pondspice, swampbay and spicebush also fall in the laurel family and could be affected by this disease.

Laurel wilt is introduced into trees by the non-native redbay ambrosia beetle. It is believed the pest can travel about 20 miles per year naturally, but can spread more quickly when transported in wood, such as firewood.

Symptoms of laurel wilt include drooping reddish or purplish foliage. Evidence of redbay ambrosia beetle attack may be found in the main stem; often strings of chewed wood, called frass toothpicks, can be seen sticking out of entry holes. Removal of tree bark reveals black streaking in the outer wood.

Homeowners with dead redbay trees are encouraged to keep cut trees on their property. Dead trees should not be removed to a landfill or off site. Proper disposal of redbay includes leaving wood on site, cutting or chipping wood on site, or burning wood on site in compliance with local and state ordinances.

In areas where burning is allowed, a permit can be obtained from the N.C. Forest Service through a local burn permit agent, a county ranger's office, or online at ncforests-service.gov/. Click on "Burning Permits" under the "Quick Links" section.

Female redbay ambrosia beetles bore into trees, carrying a fungus with them. Once the beetle is inside the tree, she makes tunnels and lays eggs. Fungal spores begin to grow in these tunnels, blocking the movement of water from the tree roots and causing the tree to wilt and eventually die from lack of water. This fungus is fast-acting; trees typically die within a month of infection. Beetles do not feed on the wood of the tree; rather, they feed upon the fungus "farm" they created.

This destructive pest was first discovered in Georgia in 2002. It is believed the fungus arrived in the U.S. along with the redbay ambrosia beetle in wooden crating material from Southeast Asia.

The detection of laurel wilt in Duplin County was reported by N.C. Forest Service staff, and confirmed by N.C. State University's Plant Disease and Insect Clinic laboratory.

To learn more about laurel wilt, go to ncforests-service.gov/ and follow the links under the Forest Health section, or call Kelly Oten, forest health monitoring coordinator with the N.C. Forest Service, at 919-553-6178, ext. 223.

Pilkington named Food and Drug Protection Division director

Audrey Pilkington of Raleigh recently was named director of the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services' Food and Drug Protection Division.

Pilkington graduated from N.C. State University with a degree in food science. She worked as a chemist for four years with the N.C. Department of Environment and Natural Resources after college, then worked in the private food manufacturing industry for 21 years in quality control/quality assurance roles.

She joined NCDA&CS in 2005 as a quality systems manager, and then was promoted to assistant director of laboratory services in 2009. In this position, she led the lab system to achieving dual ISO 17025 accreditations for both the chemistry and microbiology laboratories of the Food and Drug Protection Division. She works closely with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration on policy issues, food recalls and other issues.

"I'm very pleased to name Audrey as director of the Food and Drug Protection Division," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "She has proved herself to be an effective leader, and she knows the many issues that the Food and Drug Protection Division faces with implementation of new rules coming up as a result of the federal Food Safety Modernization Act."

Pilkington has served as the interim division director for the past eight months. As director, Pilkington will oversee the 140 employees in the division.

The division has five main sections: food program, feed program, dairy program, drug program and the laboratory.

Century Farm

Warriors Ridge Farm (1894) of Pasquotank County; FairBull Farm (1909) of Sampson County; Wilson Kids' Farm (1909) of Caldwell County; Robert Flake Shaw Jr. Farm (1912) and Gray Family Farm (1913) of Guilford County; and Winn Miller Farm (1914) in Craven County.

As you can see from this list of recently added farms, there are farms in the program from the mountains to the coast, and in a wide range of years of ownership. In fact, all but two counties have at least one Century Farm Family. I would love to see one in all 100 counties, but to date we don't have any farms in Dare or Graham counties. If anyone knows of eligible farms in these counties, please share this information with the owners.

Families can apply anytime once they have reached 100 years of ownership. Once the application has been processed, you are added to the list of families, your farm name will be on the Century Farm Family website and you will receive notification about upcoming reunions.

If you have any questions about the Century Farm Family program, please don't hesitate to call our Public Affairs office at 919-707-3001. You can find an application online at www.ncagr.gov/paffairs/century/application.htm.

Miss Jenny's Pickles named NCDA & CS Exporter of the Year

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services named Miss Jenny's Pickles as the 2015 N.C. Exporter of the Year. Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler recognized the Kernersville-based company for its achievements in exporting during the Ag Development Forum at the N.C. State Fairgrounds.

"In less than five years, Miss Jenny's Pickles has grown from a backyard operation into an international success story," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "The company's gourmet pickles can be found in retail stores in Canada, China and the United Kingdom in addition to 2,000 locations in the United States."

Jenny Fulton and Ashlee Furr started Miss Jenny's Pickles in 2010 using a recipe from Fulton's grandmother and cucumbers from a field adjacent to her grandmother's house in Belews Creek. The company now makes four flavors of pickles: Signature Salt and Pepper, Traditional Bread and Butter, Jalapeno Salt and Pepper and Habanero

Commissioner Steve Troxler, center, presented Jenny Fulton, left, and Ashley Furr, right, with the N.C. Exporter of the Year Award for their company Miss Jenny's Pickles. The company has found success in international markets, and has been featured in a 2012 segment on "60 Minutes."

Bread and Butter. Miss Jenny's Pickles is a member of Goodness Grows in North Carolina, the N.C. Specialty Food Association and the National Specialty Food Association.

During the presentation, Troxler recognized Fulton and Furr for their support of other North Carolina companies interested in exporting. The partners have shared their export experiences and sample documents at export training workshops. They also have helped other companies consolidate shipments at their warehouse before exporting.

Miss Jenny's Pickles is one of several North Carolina ag businesses finding success in international markets. North Carolina exports more than $3.9 billion worth of agricultural products.

More information about agricultural exports is available on the website for the department's International Trade Office at www.ncagr.gov/markets/international.

Food Business Conference slated for March 12 in Spruce Pine

Registration is open for the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services' fourth annual Food Business Conference, scheduled for March 12 in Spruce Pine.

The event will take place from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Mayland Community College, 200 Mayland Dr., Spruce Pine.

The conference will include presentations on product promotion, market selection and building customer loyalty.

"Building a successful food business involves so much more than just creating great food products," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "This conference will focus on ways to improve your marketing efforts, with a goal of increasing sales and product awareness."

Registration is open to existing food businesses. Space is limited and pre-registration is required. Because of catering requirements, no day-of, walk-in registrations will be accepted. Registration deadline is March 1. The cost is $40.

The agenda and registration form are available online at www.ncagr.gov/markets/agribiz/. For more information, contact Annette Dunlap at 919-707-3117 or annette.dunlap@ncagr.gov.

N.C. Pesticide Board announces settlements

The N.C. Pesticide Board recently approved the following settlement agreements for individuals and companies in Ashe, Duplin, Lenoir, Pender and Wilson counties.

- Justin M. Barker, field manager for Shatley Farms in West Jefferson, agreed to pay $700 for using pesticide in a manner inconsistent with its labeling. Barker treated a Christmas tree field with Dimethoate 4EC pesticide, which is highly toxic to bees. Barker's neighbor experienced loss to his hive after the application.
- Brian Jenkins, warehouse manager for Harvey Fertilizer & Gas Co. in Kinston, agreed to pay $400 for selling restricted-use pesticides to Joe C. Sholar of Sholar Farm Supply in Wallace. At the time of the shipments, no one at Sholar Farm Supply was a licensed pesticide dealer.
- In a related settlement, Joe C. Sholar, an employee at Sholar Farm Supply in Wallace, agreed to pay $2,500 for purchasing restricted-use pesticides without a valid pesticide-dealer license.
- David F. Rowe of Sonny Row Farm Market in Rocky Point agreed to pay $1,500 for violating Worker Protection Standards. Rowe failed to provide specific information about pesticide applications, provide safety training for workers, post pesticide safety information, restrict access during applications, provide specific information about applications, provide safety training for handlers and have decontamination supplies.
- Robert L. Dawson of Wilson agreed to pay $650 for damage caused by drift during a pesticide application. Drift from a pesticide treatment of Dawson's soybean fields damaged corn plants at an adjacent property.
