Aquaculture conference slated for March 8-10

The N.C. Aquaculture Development Conference will be held March 8-10 at the New Bern Riverfront Convention Center, with an optional aquaponics short course on March 7.

The conference includes presentations on marketing outlooks, disease management, production advances and industry updates on freshwater and cultured seafood production.

Cost of the conference is $150. Students can attend for $65.

A highlight of the conference is the Cultured Seafood Festival, a buffet of North Carolina seafood including oysters, crab cakes, clams, tilapia, hybrid striped bass, crawfish and catfish. This year the event on March 9 from 6-9 p.m. is open to the public. The cost is $50 per person. Tickets can be purchased online at www.ncaquaculture.org/

Scott Farms named Exporter of the Year

Lucama-based Scott Farms has been named the 2018 N.C. Exporter of the Year by the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

The award recognizes individuals or companies that have made a positive impact on N.C. agricultural exports. Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler presented the award to Linwood "Sonny" Scott Jr., president and co-owner of Scott Farms, during the Ag Development Forum on Feb. 1 at the State Fairgrounds.

"Scott Farms began sweet potato production with just 15 acres. Today, sweet potato production is at 3,000 acres, and the international sector accounts for more than half of their total farm sales of sweet potatoes," Troxler said. "The Scotts have built their business around the principles of hard work and delivering a quality sweet potato product. They pride themselves on service and treating people as they would like to

Farms welcome visitors with spring agritourism events

From Easter egg hunts and strawberry patches to educational workshops and goat yoga, North Carolina farmers have a variety of activities planned this spring to welcome visitors on their farms.

The number of agritourism farms across the state is on the rise. In the past 10 years, North Carolina has seen an 89 percent increase in the number of farms welcoming visitors. There are now more than 1,000 agritourism operations located from the mountains to the coast.

"Agritourism is a vital part of the state's nearly $85 billion agriculture industry," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "It not only provides additional revenue for farmers, but also serves as a bridge between the state's urban and rural communities. For many North Carolinians, agritourism is the only opportunity they have to learn about farming and where their food comes from."

Following are some agritourism activities available on local farms this spring organized by region. Before visiting, guests are encouraged to contact the farm to confirm hours of operation and costs associated with (See Spring agritourism, pg. 8)

Commissioner Troxler

At press time, I am on a trade mission to Brazil, touring factories, farms and other ag facilities to learn more about agricultural production there. I am joined by representatives from the North Carolina Farm Bureau, N.C. commodity groups and farmers, along with N.C. Board of Ag members.

At the Ag Development forum in January, N.C. State University economist Blake Brown talked about North Carolina's competi-

by Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler

tion when it comes to agriculture, and Brazil is the largest head-to-head competitor on the agricultural market.

Brazil is a major exporter of grain, soybeans, cotton and corn. It is the world's largest poultry producer and the second-largest tobacco producer behind China.

Those commodities should all sound familiar to North Carolina farmers, because those commodities are grown here, too, and exported as well.

This trip is a learning trip. We want to understand Brazilian agricultural production firsthand and walk away knowing how to use this knowledge to strengthen and grow North Carolina agriculture and our export opportunities.

Brazil faces some of the same challenges as the United States. Namely, improvements needed in infrastructure. And as agriculture continues to trend towards a global marketplace, I want North Carolina to have the commodities, infrastructure and trade partners to grow. Like the United States, Brazil's infrastructure needs include regional airports, construction of major rail lines and broadband internet service.

Interestingly, Brazil and the United States share a similar climate make up. South Florida and Santa Cruz, Brazil are geographically at 30 degrees latitude, giving them a similar climate profile. However, the seasons in Brazil are opposite of those in the Northern Hemisphere. July is mid-winter and January is summertime.

Just like the United States, Brazil is looking for ways to expand production and increase trade. In 2016, Brazil's major export markets were China, the European Union and the United States.

North Carolina's largest trade partners are China, Japan, Canada and Mexico. Top exports include pork, tobacco, poultry, soybeans and cotton. Exports will continue to play a significant role in the future success of North Carolina agriculture. More than $4 billion is exported annually, not including $1.5 billion in wood products. The potential for growth is tremendous since 95 percent of the world population lives outside the U.S.

I don't love being away from my farm and the state, but as we work to develop greater trade opportunities for N.C. agriculture, we have to be aware of our competition in order to be better prepared to market ourselves and our products.

I hope to have more reports from our trip in future issues of the paper.

Two new regional agronomists hired

Two new regional agronomists recently joined the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services Agronomic Services Division. Brandon Poole serves Alamance, Caswell, Durham, Guilford, Granville, Orange, Person, Rockingham and Stokes counties. Tyler Whaley serves Duplin, New Hanover, Onslow, Pender and Sampson counties.

Poole earned a bachelor's degree in plant and soil sciences with an agricultural business concentration from N.C. State University, and an associate's degree in field crops technology from N.C. State. He worked as a horticultural crops research operations manager at the Central Crops Research Station in Clayton, and as a research specialist with the N.C. State Small Grains Extension and Breeding programs.

"Poole's experience with field crops, horticultural crops and pasture management gives him a great background to work with the diversity of agriculture in this region," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "I know he will be a valuable resource for area farmers."

Whaley grew up on a family farm in Kinston that produced corn, wheat, soybeans, cotton, sweet potatoes and tobacco. He earned a master's degree in crop science from N.C. State University and a bachelor's degree in agriculture science also from N.C. State, with minors in crop science and agricultural business management. He previously served as an agriculture extension agent for Wayne County.

"Tyler's hands-on experience on the farm, plus his work with the N.C. Cooperative Extension Service will serve farmers well," Troxler said. "I know he will be a knowledgeable resource for growers seeking to optimize crop nutrients and manage plant-parasitic nematodes."

Regional agronomists are part of the Field Services Section of the department's Agronomic Services Division. They provide advice on crop fertilization, nutrient management, lime needs, soil testing, plant tissue analysis, use of animal wastes and composts, nematode analysis, and testing of source water and nutrient solutions. To see the Field Services Section map, visit www.ncagr.gov/agronomi/documents/RAMP.pdf.

be treated."

Scott Farms is a sixth-generation family farm whose roots began with tobacco, but over the years has diversified to add sweet potatoes, wheat, soybeans and corn. Scott owns the farm with his wife Alice, and sons Linwood III and Dewey.

Scott Farms ranks as one of the largest in the region with more than 14,000 acres of farmland, with 3,000 acres of sweet potatoes and over 6,000 acres of tobacco harvested.

The Scotts have set up a marketing and sales office in the United Kingdom allowing them to build good business relationships and provide excellent customer service to this growing market, Troxler said.

The company has been progressive as it has expanded into sweet potatoes. The Scott's constructed a new technology-driven packing facility that includes computer-operated packing lines, and the farm also uses GPS-guidance systems on tractors.

That investment in technology has allowed Scott Farms to provide a safe, traceable supply of products to its customers.

"Those are essential components in today's business climate whether you are marketing products here or overseas," Troxler said. "Ag production that factors in accountability and traceability are benchmarks to a modern and progressive farm."

Residents encouraged to get NC REAL ID to ease travel

Residents can obtain a new form of identification that meets new federal security requirements for boarding a commercial airplane or visiting a military base or other federal facility at driver license offices across the state. Obtaining the new ID could benefit farmers and farm workers who may be frequent flyers.

N.C. Division of Motor Vehicle officials encourage residents to obtain a N.C. REAL

ID when renewing their driver license or ID card. To make it more convenient when boarding, frequent flyers are recommended to apply for their REAL ID in advance of their next flight.

"Traveling by air will be much easier with a REAL ID when the Transportation Security Administration begins enforcing tougher identification requirements at the airport on Oct. 1, 2020," said DMV Commissioner Torre J. Jessup said.

The N.C. REAL ID is just like a traditional North Carolina license or ID, but has a gold star endorsement at the top. The federal REAL ID Act established the requirements and the program is administered by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security.

Appointments for priority service can be scheduled for any driver license office by calling the DMV Customer Contact Center at 919-715-7000.

To obtain their first REAL

ID, residents must bring documents to a local driver license office to verify their:

- Identity and Date of Birth
- Social Security number
- Residence
- Legal presence

Without a REAL ID, travelers will have to provide additional identification to board a commercial flight and visit other federal facilities beginning in 2020. Required identification may vary by location. The complete list of verification documents is available at NCREALID.com.

As a way to help farmers and agricultural workers stay safe at work, the N.C. Department of Labor offers safety videos on a variety of topics through its YouTube channel. Video topics include: preventing green tobacco sickness, hazard communication, tobacco harvester safety, heat stress, migrant housing requirements, forklift safety, and information about the NCDOL's Gold Star Growers program. The videos are in English and Spanish to increase understanding of safety hazards and preventing accidents. To learn more about the NCDOL and the Agricultural Safety and Health Bureau, go to www.nclabor.com or call 1-800-NC-LABOR (800-625-2267). NCDOL is also on Facebook and Twitter (@NCDOL).

Beekeepers with bees for rent and growers interested in bee pollination services can post their information on the BeeLinked website at www.ncagr.com/beelinked. The site is hosted by the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services and the N.C. State University Apiculture Program. Anyone interested in listing their information can do so by filling out an online Submit Your Ad form on the BeeLinked page or by contacting NCDA&CS at 919-233-8214 or by email at NCHoneybee@ncagr.gov or call NCSU at 919-515-1660. The NCDA&CS Plant Industry Division regulates the movement of agricultural or related items capable of spreading harmful insects, diseases, and other pests. Beekeepers participating in this program will be required to comply with all honey and bee industry regulations.

The N.C. Ag Finance Authority provides credit to agriculture in areas where financing is not available at reasonable rates and terms. The agency originates, services and finances farm loans, rural business loans, disaster loans and cotton gin loans. It also offers tax-exempt ag development bonds for agribusiness processing, ag-related manufacturing or ag waste disposal. For more about Ag Finance Authority programs or to request a loan application, call 919-790-3949 or email at RequestLoanInfo@ncagr.gov.
